Return to the Caffe Cino
From 1958 to 1968, on Cornelia Street in New York City's Greenwich Village, there was a boho meeting place called Caffe Cino. The gay Sicilian-American, Joe Cino (below left) served cappuccinos, cannole and free theatre, and along with Judson Church and La Mama ETC, the tiny joint emerged as ground zero for what became known as the Off-Off-Broadway Theatre.

"Hard bit by the bug, we made a family decision to head North and find the bright lights of Broadway. My Dad was the advance scout. He went ahead of the family by several months, saving money by writing home on anything handy—place mats, the backs of envelopes, and Caffe Cino menus." Walter Michael Harris, from his introductory memoir

Caffe Cino is widely recognized as the birthplace of Off-Off-Broadway theater and is also highly significant as a pioneer in the development of gay theater, at a time when it was still illegal to depict homosexuality on stage. In 1958, Joe Cino (1931-1967) rented a ground-story commercial space here, originally intending to operate a ...
